

Through inspiration the mind opens to a world of creativity
That which ever so rarely experiences the fair light of day
Is given an opportunity to express aspects of the self
Which seldom have a chance to voice suppressed aspects
Of innermost truth; yet suppression of the inner voice
Eventually leads to conflict within the self, as certain Thoughts are denied a chance to manifest within the Physical world: unless an individual recognizes the value
Of creative thought, the mind remains grounded by Mechanistic thoughtforms; this limits the ability
To shed outdated modes of thought, unconsciously
Subduing the authentic impulse to seek inner development:
Unless one attempts to bridge the gap between these
Two worlds, thoughts tend to drift towards everyday
Concerns; the external focus undermining attempts to Connect with the inner nature which yearns to convey
A wealth of knowledge to those who patiently seek answers
To the crucial questions which dominate their waking hours.